

DRIVE MEANINGFUL CHANGE

Build a coaching culture in your organization.

A growing number of organizations are discovering the capacity of coaching to enrich employees' development, achieve strategic goals and transform workplaces.

Your investment in building a strong coaching culture will pay off: Industry research shows that organizations with strong coaching cultures report higher employee engagement than those without strong coaching cultures. They're also more likely to report recent revenue above their industry peer group.

Are you ready to transform your organization? Let the International Coach Federation (ICF) connect you with research, best practices and insights to help achieve your strategic goals.

Understanding the building blocks

Through a research partnership with the Human Capital Institute (HCI), ICF is exploring the components of strong coaching cultures and their role in engaging employees, supporting leadership development and achieving strategic goals.

Setting high standards

ICF offers the only globally recognized, independent credentialing program for professional coach practitioners. To find an external coach practitioner who's met ICF's high standards for credentialing, visit the Credentialed Coach Finder at CredentialedCoachFinder.com.

ICF also accredits programs that deliver coach-specific training. To find ICF-accredited training for your organization's internal coach practitioners and managers/leaders using coaching skills, visit the Training Program Search Service at coachfederation.org/tpss.
